THE PETRIFIED FOREST IN CALIFORNIA.
[San Francisco Post.]

The site of the petrified forest is about 1,600 feet above the sea-level, and lies in the same trend with the Geysers, Mount St. Helena, and the thermal springs of Calistoga. Geologically it is one vast tufa bed, in which the trees lie as they were thrown, probably thousands of years ago, by some vast convulsion of nature. This tufa, I will say for the benefit of the uninitiated in scientific lore, is a volcanic ash or cinder; it is lava thrown upward in a fiery mass and descending with rain. It is gray in color and granular in structure. Sometimes it is found imbedded in the form of little globes or bombs. Ammonites, found in the strata, fix the event in the cretaceous period; the professor inclines to the opinion that it was pre-glacial. The trees lie at five or six different levels—on the lower almost north and south; on the highest, northeast and southwest. At the latter level the trees must have been buried under 80 or 100 feet of lava; at the lowest, 500 feet, their dip conforms to the dip of the tufa, and is at an angle of from thirty to forty-five degrees. They are fragments, many of which have been converted into charcoal, others into lignite, and others into beautiful specimens of jet. Where the heart of a tree had decayed the cavity is filled with opal, a form of lustrous, uncrystalized silica, containing water. Chalcedony, another form of silica, but clear and limpid, is found in other cavities. No ton has been petrified, and only here and there a root. Many have been charred by fire. Some are broken after petrifaction had taken place, as there is no mark of splintering or bruising. What must have been the giant force that followed their first destruction to have dealt this further blow? The majority of the trees are redwood, some the madrone, and the limb of an oak has also been found. One of the first named is eleven feet in diameter, and the part of the trunk still preserved is sixty-eight feet in length. Another shows marks of having been hacked with an ax probably made of obsidian, as all the prehistoric implements from this locality were made of this same substance—a volcanic rock, which appears in abundance all about. There is no mistaking the fact that the cutting was done before petrifaction began, as the cuts occur at different angles to the grain of the wood.

GEN. JOHN BIDWELL, OF BUTTE COUNTY, sends an interesting contribution to the S. F. Journal of Commerce stand, comprising Chili, Yokohama, Nantucket and Chinese Squash; egg plants as large as a child's head, and the "Dohoura," or Egyptian corn, which is remarkable as being resurrected from parent seed which was found in the hands of mummy, exposed to the gaze of the curious, after a slumber of thousands of years. This corn is the most hardy and prolific of any grain known, as it yields 300 bushels to the acre. The seeds of the above were all obtained at the centennial, seeming to flourish with vigor in their new allotment of earth. From Gen. Bidwell's farm, (the famous "Rancho Chico,") also comes six varieties of almonds, olives, chestnuts, pomegranates, delicious grapes, jute and ramie in fibre and plant, the latter looking like fish poles. The enterprising proprietor of the Journal of Commerce has had comprehensive views of the "Pacific Coast Products," exhibit taken by Taber, which will be valuable and interesting souvenirs of the 12th exposition of industry of the Mechanics' Institute.

VALUE OF FOREST LEAVES.—The effect of removing the litter of a manure forest is really far greater than would result from the mere removal of so many pounds of nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potash. When litter is allowed to accumulate from year to year, and to undergo its natural slow discomposition, the result is a formation of a forest soil exceedingly rich in humus; the formation of such a soil is often of priceless value to the forester. A rough, sterile, rocky soil, becomes, when penetrated with humus, capable of retaining water, and thus able to withstand drought. By this action of humus the mineral plant food which the soil contains is also brought into a more soluble and available form, while the greatly increased porosity of the soil protects all soluble plant food from being washed out by heavy rain, a calamity to which the original rocky soil was constantly liable. So great is the importance of humus, that in many forest soils its presence is the ameliorating principle which renders cultivation possible. Especially must this be the case on the hillsides so frequently devoted to the growth of timber. Nor in this case are advantages of the deep humus soil confined to the tree growing upon it. Owing to enormous power of retaining water possessed by a spongy vegetable soil, the adjacent valleys are effectually protected against disastrous floods. Storm water is retained or delayed, is stored up in the forest soil for use in summer drought, instead of descending in violent streams, tearing up the soil and spreading havoc all around. The careful maintenance of forests upon hill-sides becomes in this view a question which is in many cases of national importance. To produce in its fullest extent the humus covering of the soil, it is necessary that the forest should be planted sufficiently close; in open spaces admitting light and air the humus will rapidly oxidize and disappear. For the same reason care should be taken that planting immediately follows the felling of timber; the ground, as far as possible should never be suffered to lie open and uncovered.

SUBSTITUTE FOR SHORT FALL PASTURE.—If the pastures are short of grass there is but one proper remedy—stall feed the stock. It is not necessary to draw upon the hay-mow to do this. Every farmer ought to plant a large piece of corn for fodder. Sow a piece of ground with oats, to be cut early for the same purpose, and use them to help out the poor pasture rather than to feed your cattle in the mowing field. But if the farmer has not provided for such fodder, then top the corn and feed that out; gather the deformed pumpkins, or those lying too thick together; use some of the early clover, or cut what rowen you can. And rather than feed the mowing-field, use some grain or hay, or buy a few hundred pounds of shorts. The stock must not suffer for food, and the farmer cannot afford the injury to his mowing lands that feeding will do.

WHEN TO PRUNE.—In this new handbook for fruit growers, F. R. Elliot says: "The best time is just at the fall of the vine-leaf in October. Let the main pruning be at that time, if it be possible to compass that; then; but if the work can not then be done, do it if you can before severe freezing weather; if not then done, postpone it until there comes a regular thaw in winter—say a week or ten days of soft, moist weather, when the first frost is nearly or quite out of the ground—and then don't neglect your duty any longer."

The campmeeting at Caribou, under the direction of the Methodists, last week, was very successful. It continued over the Sabbath. On that day some 2000 were on the grounds. All were quiet and orderly, and the best of attention was given to the services. Rev. Messrs. Bolton and Garnet of Penobscot, and Glidden of Montville, Moor of Houlton, and the local clergy were present, and preached during the service. Rev. Amos Prince of Bangor, the presiding elder of this district, preached on Sunday afternoon, on the practical duties of the Christian's life. An excellent sermon.

The meeting of the Presque Isle Temperance Union was a decided success, one of the best they had during the season. A very able and interesting essay was read by Mrs. Gilford, wife of Rev. Mr. Gilford, upon the harmony of love and law in promoting temperance. Addresses were made by Mr. Stickney and Mr. Canby of Bangor.

Franklin.

The North Franklin Agricultural Society were to have held their Show and Fair at Philips, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, and an early hour Tuesday the people began to move cattle, sheep and horses. A large number had come out from Rangely and other back towns, but the storm soon put a veto on the movements. The trustees have adjourned the Fair for one week. So the Show and Fair will be held at Philips Tuesday and Wednesday.

The Gardiner Journal says the wife of Capt. Brookings, in a fit of insanity, set her house on fire. Mr. B. while at work in his garden, saw smoke issuing from one corner of the house, and extinguished it without much loss. Mrs. B. was carried to the hospital that night. She has been in the hospital before, but has been home for a year or more.

Sunday afternoon Capt. Cyrus Sturdevant of Portland, spoke in Memorial Hall, West Waterville, on the subject of temperance, under the auspices of the Reform Club.

The hardware store of C. W. Folsom was entered the night of the 9th and money and goods to the amount of about $400 were taken. Entrance was effected by removing a pane of glass, and a small sized man entered through the sash, and evidently opening the front doors to admit the rest of the thieves.

A sharp competition has started between V. D. Pinkham of Augusta, and the present mail contractors, both running stages from Brann's Mills to China, at nominal fares.

The Patrons of Husbandry of Monmouth dedicated their new and splendid hall Oct. 9th, at two o'clock P. M., Grand Master Ham being present and assisting. It was a very enjoyable affair, delegations from Wales, Litchfield lodges being present. Remarks were made by Grand Master Ham, Master of the lodge, C. H. Berry of Litchfield, Eben Mark Getchell, Master J. R. Nelson of Winthrop lodge, True of Litchfield lodge, and others, after which a splendid repast was passed around, when the company separated for their homes. Truly their building is the best in town, and they have a very fine hall and anterooms.

Lincoln.

Thursday night Dr. S. W. Johnson, started at about nine o'clock from Muscongus for Bristol Mills. The night was very dark, and the Doctor trusted to his horse to keep the road. However, when he felt himself and carriage lifted over a moderate sized stone wall he became convinced that the horse had not done so. He left his carriage and learned that he was in a swamp some distance from the road. After spending some time in a vain search for the road, he tied his horse, and waded through the swamp until he reached higher ground, where he remained until morning.

Thursday as B. V. Stimson's younger son, of Richmond, about eight years of age, was climbing to the haymow in the barn, he slipped from the ladder and fell to the floor, a distance of twelve or fifteen feet. He was taken to the house in an unconscious state. A doctor was called, but all effort to revive him proved of no avail. The little fellow lived about ten hours after his fall. This is a hard blow for the family and neighbors, for he was a very bright, active lad, with a lively disposition and was a general favorite with all.

Somerset.

Court adjourned finally last Saturday, after a three weeks' session. Not a very large amount of business was done. The most important trial was a criminal one, the celebrated Smith embezzlement case, which occupied four days. This resulted in a verdict of acquittal. The respondent was a lady about twenty-seven years of age.

A burglar entered the dwelling house of Dr. J. W. Clough, of Liberty, in the nighttime, on the 1st inst., and took the doctor's wallet from his pants by the side of his bed, containing $10, and departed with it. The wallet contained some valuable papers. The entrance was made through a window. The departure was by the front door.

AMERICAN COOKERY.

The importance of good cooking as a means of health and happiness is very much underrated by many housekeepers, especially those of America. There must always be enough to eat, but the quality is considered of much less consequence; provided it be wholesome and not too much trouble to prepare, the ordinary American mind is fully satisfied. The taste of the thrifty housekeeper runs much more to a fine display of table-linen, silver, and glass—things which delight the eye, but can never satisfy a hungry man, nor promote friendship and good humor. At how many tables, even of rich Americans, may we find this gorgeous array of table furniture, and view the elegant china filled with food at which an ordinary French laborer would turn up his nose! Among people of moderate means the erroneous idea prevails that delicate living is extravagant and out of the reach of ordinary mortals, who eat their greasy beef and watery potatoes with the comforting reflection that thereby they are practicing the great virtue of economy. This is a terrible mistake. Those same people are daily wasting material enough to enable any French peasant woman to prepare a delicate and palatable repast.

Economy in the kitchen is of course impossible where matters are left in charge of some ignorant cook who cannot and would not if she could pay the least attention to the saving and proper use of all the bits and ends which under her sway find their way to the soap-fat man and the swill tub. Waste appears to be the grand watch-word of the ordinary American or English kitchen, and is all the more piteous to behold when we consider the saving and thrifty character of these very people. This waste, then, is the result of ignorance and inattention to what is really one of the questions of social life. On this account every new book bringing forward new facts and new ideas in regard to this all-important subject should be warmly welcomed and faithfully studied by every American woman.

"From dainty coquetry alone," says Mrs. Henderson, "the French woman appreciates the powers of their dainty table. Cooking is an art they cultivate. Any of the ... monde are proud to originate a new dish; many famous ones doing them credit in bearing their names. Until this is true of American women as well, the American cuisine can scarcely be expected to rise above its present mediocrity, for alas! Mrs. Henderson's remark is too true, that "American women seemed possessed with the idea that it is not the fashion to know how to cook; that, as an accomplishment, the art of cooking is as ornamental as that of needle-work or piano-playing."—Helen S. Conant, in Harper's Magazine.

When we look around us, we see men of good common sense, and frequently but little education, who have raised large families and accumulated considerable property, all by industry and economy. Can any one tell why it is that the soul of a young and pretty woman is more dear to the average deacon than that of a squint-eyed woman with a wart on her nose?—When we have seen a young and pretty woman go up to the altar we have noticed half a dozen deacons knock their heads together in their eagerness to whisper consolation to her bruised spirit. But when the squint-eyed woman knelt down only one deacon went near her, and he merely touched her on the shoulder and said, "Pray fervently, sister, and all will be well."

"ARE THEY REPUBLICANS?"

The Boston Journal is so completely bewildered by the crushing defeat which the "policy" it advocates has brought upon the Republican Party in the President's own State, that it is cracking its little whip with the recklessness and fury of a drunken plantation overseer. Heading an article with the above caption—which in itself is an amusing impudence in a dough-face organ—it raves at the people who refuse to abandon their principles at the behest of a dickering Administration and proposes to accelerate the restoration of the Lost Cause by reading out of the Republican Party the whole great army of citizens who, like the veterans of the Ohio Western Reserve, have been the color-bearers in all its grandest campaigns, but who refuse to trail the old standards in the dust. Perhaps the Journal will have a good time in its undertaking, but unless it gets clear over into the Democratic fold it is likely to find itself in a lonesome condition before the "reading out" process is completed.

The Journal's article opens with these words:

Already we have noticed that several journals which have hitherto claimed to be Republican are exceedingly jubilant over the Republican defeat in Ohio. Indeed, this class of papers are a great deal more elated than the out-and-out Democratic organs, which are content to express their approbation of the result in Ohio in their ordinary manner.

There is nothing in the above that can properly apply to us, but the euphemism "several journals" has become so trite and stereotyped in that paper, that we do not choose to misunderstand the direction of its spite. The Journal need not flatter itself, however, that we put on any such jacket because it fits, as before we finish we hope to button it very snugly around the originator of the garment. A paper which will make such assertions, while too cowardly to quote a sentence from either of the "several journals" thus assailed, is not entitled to much attention, and we state distinctly that so far as our columns, or those of any of the Republican papers which the Journal is in the habit of abusing, are concerned, it cannot find therein the slightest excuse for the falsehood it puts forth.

Instead of exulting over the disastrous result of the Ohio campaign, we have lamented it with a sincerity that would not permit us to ignore the cause of Republican defeat. We recognized and warned against the fatal policy that has given that great State over as a reinforcement of the Democratic "Solid South," and our protest and warning were uttered plainly before the State Convention, under the malign influence of Stanley Matthews, defiantly flung an obnoxious and renegade platform in the face of the sincere Republicans of Ohio. We regret the defeat of Republicanism in one of the great loyal States of the Union, but we do not date that defeat from the 9th of October, when we know that the Republican death-knell was rung months before by the same hands which hauled down the standard of Republican Principle and ran up in its stead a patch-work of ragged Democratic bunting, bearing the label of "Policy."

Believing, as we do sincerely, that the policy of surrendering the National supremacy to the spirit of mob rule, and of sacrificing loyalty for the glorification of treason leads directly to the brink of an abyss which has already yawned before us, and from which we escaped only through frightful sacrifices, we should have regretted to have had the result of the Ohio election hailed as a Republican indorsement of that disastrous policy and used to give it impetus on its ruinous course. That the success of the nominal Republican ticket in that State would have been solely used for that purpose, its sturdiest Republicans were aware, and that conviction held back the hands that would fain have carried Republican ballots but refused to strike at the principles which make Republicanism something more than a name.

But let us see about the "several journals" which are said to exult over the disaster in Ohio. We have shown that the anti-policy papers recognize and bewail the full extent and causes of the disaster. How is it with some of the others? The Boston Journal seems inclined to take a cheerful view of the calamity, as we find it jauntily remarking thus:

The result in Ohio is not what it should have been, but it comes from such a peculiar combination of causes as not to involve any general discouragement to the Republican party but rather to supply some useful hints to the organization in States whose elections are yet to be held.

Nothing very sorrowful in that view! Indeed the Journal sees nothing in the result to "involve any general discouragement," but is inclined to regard it with satisfaction as supplying "useful hints" to the party in other States. We can see some very "useful hints," although probably differing from those the Journal is willing to recognize, but how can we account for the levity of that paper in thus treating of an overwhelming Democratic triumph in Ohio. Can it be that the Journal, itself, is one of the "several journals" it has been denouncing? It would seem so, for in the same issue we read:

If such journals are Republican they should remember that the party defeated in Ohio is the only Republican party in that State.

Yes, and that is the very party whose defeat the Journal says involves no discouragement, but is rather beneficial in supplying "useful hints" to the party elsewhere! And then the Journal asks itself the pertinent question:

Can persons or papers really Republican rejoice over a Democratic triumph?

We don't think they can, but we have cited ample evidence that some papers claiming to be Republican—vide Boston Journal—take a very cheerful view of that serious event. And the plurality of the Journal's specification is supplied by one of its near neighbors and an equally obsequious champion of the "policy." If the Advertiser is not "jubilant" over the disaster it certainly inclines much farther in that direction than any of the papers which are customarily arraigned by the Journal. The Advertiser editorially finds the event "not altogether without its consolations," and further emphatically declares:

The circumstances of the defeat are not such as to cause any deep-seated melancholy in Republican breasts.

The absence of melancholy is very suggestive of joy, and we may properly repeat the Journal's conundrum:

Can persons or papers really Republican rejoice over a Democratic triumph?

Really, it seems that the Journal need not go outside of Boston for a solution of its problem, and, indeed, one would suppose that a properly adjusted mirror in its own sanctum would furnish a conspicuous answer.

Now, a word concerning this very cheap impudence about "real Republicans." We think we understand just how much Republicanism was involved in the Ohio campaign, but we prefer in this writing to cite the Journal's and Advertiser's own estimates thereof. Both of them, in enumerating the causes of defeat, denounce the financial part of the platform as a shuffling compromise with inflationists and unworthy of Republican support. Both of them denounce the Communistic demagogism of the platform on the Labor question, and both have arraigned the head of the State ticket for pandering to that Communistic monstrosity in his speeches in the campaign. They, therefore, find no element of Republicanism in any plank of the platform touching National issues, except only the indorsement of the new "policy" of the Administration in surrendering the legal State Governments of the South to the demands of rebels who have been almost continually in arms against the authority of States and Nation since the nominal surrender at Appomattox. Those papers find that the whole platform, outside of the "policy" indorsement, and that the attitude and utterances of the candidate for Governor, were not such as to entitle them to Republican support. The question remaining is simply whether the surrender policy of the Administration is in itself so distinctively and pre-eminently Republican as to have demanded the support of financial heresies and Communistic doctrines for the sake of indorsing that "policy?" We emphatically declare that the surrender policy is not Republicanism, and the repudiation of that spurious claim comes thundering from the Republican strongholds of the President's own State.

Since the denial by Peter and the betrayal by Judas Iscariot, there has been no more soulless, palpable, cold-blooded treachery to the truth, than the astounding claim that the abandonment of the doctrine of National supremacy, the overthrow of the principle of government by the majority, the refusal to protect peaceable and loyal citizens in their political rights, the elevation of revolutionists like Wade Hampton to arbitrary power over a persecuted and outraged people, the handing of "the poor black man of the South" over to a Democratic rule which Rutherford B. Hayes declared on the 5th of November, 1876, would be more intolerable than slavery, and which William M. Evarts a few days before declared would "deserve the curse of God and man,"—the claim that a policy which involves these things and bears these fruits, is in strict conformity with the principles and pledges of the Republican Party as proclaimed by the National Convention at Cincinnati!

The writer hereof had an individual, if humble, share in the adoption of that National Republican Platform, is familiar with its text and fully cognizant of the spirit which animated that Republican Convention; and without fear of any honest challenge we denounce the pretence that the abandonment of Southern Republicans was demanded or even dreamed of by the Convention of Cincinnati as a cowardly and lying lie! The Platform itself most eloquently refutes the slander, and the attempt to argue that a declaration of principle drawn up by the hand of Daniel H. Chamberlain, was actually intended to pledge the Republican National Administration to aid the Rifle Clubs of South Carolina to strike down popular government and drive him as a fugitive from the Governorship to which he was chosen by the people, is amazing in its effrontery.

We declare that the surrender policy is not Republicanism and that "journals" which have abandoned every other doctrine and base their claims solely upon that policy are not "really Republican." We hold ourselves prepared to prove it by every National Republican Platform adopted since the State Rights Rebellion was declared overthrown. We hold ourselves ready to prove it by the Constitutional Amendments which triumphed in a struggle against this identical policy as championed by its inventor, Andrew Johnson, and which were set up by the loyal people of this Union for impregnable bulwarks against the very assault which has been treacherously and too successfully made upon the vital results of the triumph over armed treason. We hold ourselves ready to prove it by the legislation of successive Republican Congresses enthusiastically ratified by the loyal people of the country. We hold ourselves ready to prove it by innumerable declarations of Republican State platforms and by volume upon volume of the speeches which have rallied the Republican vote in State and National campaigns. We hold ourselves ready to prove it by the record of Andrew Johnson's treachery; aye, we will prove it out of the mouth of Rutherford B. Hayes himself, by his denunciation of that predecessor's treachery, by his expressed sentiments during his canvass for the Presidency, by his specific and sorrowing declarations on the day after the election, even by his Inaugural Address, when, with the oath of office fresh upon his lips, he solemnly proclaimed that

"A moral obligation rests upon "the National Government to employ its Constitutional power and "influence to establish the rights of "the people it has emancipated, "and to protect them in the enjoyment of those rights whenever "they are infringed or assailed!"

As for the Boston Journal, which so coolly assumes to decide who are and who are not Republicans, we will guaranty to convict it of the basest apostasy, according to its own definitions as copied in our own columns; and if it will furnish us with its files for a single year prior to March 4, 1877 we will multiply an hundred-fold the proofs of its cowardice, stultification and abandonment of every essential idea of Republicanism, by its own testimony. Instead of venting its silly and impotent rage upon those who refuse to follow it in repudiation of the principles on which the Republican Party and republican government are based, there are abundant indications that it may find more creditable employment in some rational effort to prevent its own State from following the melancholy example of Ohio, in furnishing "useful hints" to the thoughtful members of the Republican Party.

The Boston Globe emits the following:

The President does not seem to be much disconcerted by the news of the Democratic victory in Ohio, and he remarks, according to a Washington special, that although his policy may create a temporary sinking of the Republican stomach, he believes that in a short time it will regain its wonted tone and vigor. At all events he expresses himself as determined to keep on in the way he has been going successfully, and intimates that if the politicians don't like it they may proceed to make themselves as comfortable as possible on the back seats.

It will strike most people that the above would be remarkable language from a President concerning the disastrous loss of his own State on account of his own course; and in view of the protest from the Republican strongholds of Ohio, his contemptuous declaration that he will carry out his "policy" in spite of the party that elected him, is as offensive as the arrogance of Andrew Johnson. With the Republicans of the Western Reserve Old Guard of Ohio sent to back seats while the Hamptons and Lamars are brought to the front, the President may be "comfortable," but we are very sure the people of the North will not be.

THE RESULT IN OHIO.

[From the Kennebec Journal Oct. 11.]

If the earlier reports are to be relied upon as correct, the Republican party has suffered defeat in Ohio, in the State election of Tuesday, and the Democratic candidate for Governor, Richard M. Bishop, is elected by a majority variously estimated from five thousand to ten thousand. The political complexion of the Legislature, is not exactly known—news from the western reserves must come in before that can be definitely ascertained—but the alarming probabilities are that that too has passed into the hands of our political opponents. This Legislature, elected for two years, will choose a successor to United States Senator Stanley Matthews, whose term expires in March, 1879. And just here we notice one of the principal causes of defeat. The Republicans of Ohio do not cordially approve of the substitution of time-serving policy and expedients for the clear and manifest principles so long held by the party, and which have heretofore given it life and a claim for life on the suffrages of the American people. As Stanley Matthews personified and illustrates in an intensified degree this idea of subserviency, he became conspicuous in the campaign, and this champion gusher of the nineteenth century has been laid out stiff and stark in his winding sheet, ready for burial in the political grave which his own hands have dug.

There were other causes contributing to defeat, such as the multiplicity of parties and factions, the conglomeration of platforms and principles, and the entire absence of all principle. There was Sam Carey's "National organization," the Greenbackers; the Prohibitionists; the Workingmen's party, the striking elements, and various other organizations, more or less distracting and discouraging to Republican prospects. These, with the veteran "General Apathy," so apt to be on hand during an off year, had, combined, the effect to lead to the result stated.

By no torture of language can the result be reckoned as an indorsement of the President's Southern policy. This policy was clearly and conspicuously made an issue in the President's own State, and the people have put their seal of condemnation upon it. We say this, not to find a crumb of comfort in the midst of defeat, but because it is a fact in political history. They of his own household, must part company with him in their opinion on the wisdom of the policy. It was a gigantic mistake to make this the chief issue of the campaign. There are common grounds upon which the party could, unitedly, march on to victory. Twice the leader of the Republican party in their Gubernatorial campaigns, Mr. Hayes has triumphed on a platform in which the entire party and the loyal men of the country had full faith, the victory was reiterated when he was sent to Congress, and to fill the Presidential chair. But, on Monday last, from forty thousand to fifty thousand Republicans in Ohio, did not see their way clear to come to the polls, when their votes would be reckoned as an approval of a line of policy in which they had no faith. They are none the less Republicans for that, and the temporary defeat of the party reveals the mistake made in the early campaign in introducing an unnecessary and distracting element, and making a bald issue of an experiment that the Republicans everywhere are willing time should test. The result in Ohio is no indication that the State has hopelessly drifted into the hands of the Democracy. And among the President's warmest supporters, in his good intentions and purposes, among the truest friends of Republican principles, will be found those, who, on Tuesday last, could not indorse a policy which at the present is but an experiment. Had that question not been made the leading issue, the State would have remained as true and as stalwart as Maine.

THE CAUSES OF DEFEAT.

[From the New York Times.]

The falling off in the Republican vote in Ohio is heaviest in the strongest Republican districts, and the dissatisfaction with Judge West's unfortunate socialist expression early in the canvass, as well as with the President's Southern policy, has been deepest in the Western Reserve.

Although Republicans generally are unable to treat as of little moment the loss of a State which, properly handled, might have been retained, they are not greatly surprised. Having seen their party's leaders in the State throw overboard all that has imparted strength and dignity to the organization, and descend to vulgar rivalry with the demagogism of their opponents, their interest in the success of the Republican ticket was of a languid character. A great opportunity has been wasted. The real record of the party identified it with sound principles and honorable purposes. It had achieved triumphs over inflationists and repudiators. It had refused to pander to the prejudices and passions of an ignorant multitude who imagined that the public faith might be violated with impunity, and that prosperity might be restored by the issue of a worthless currency. It had upheld distinctive principles as the basis of action toward the South, and had consistently urged the exaction of guarantees as preliminary to the withdrawal of Federal authority from the task which reconstruction had rendered obligatory. These are features of the policy for which Ohio Republicanism contended. Suddenly, they were discarded. The convention held to formulate a platform and to nominate candidates came under the control of two demoralizing forces; one representing the wishes of the Administration in regard to its Southern policy; the other embodying all the evils of financial bad faith, with silver substituted for greenbacks. On the former question the convention surrendered its hold upon the convictions of the party it was supposed to represent; on the latter, it forfeited its claim to the respect of honest men. Mr. Stanley Matthews, reputed to hold confidential relations with the President, became the champion of principles abhorred by the best members of the Republican Party everywhere, and advocated measures leading to anarchy. To complete the series of blunders, Judge West, whose nomination for the Governorship Secretary Sherman had hurriedly approved, inaugurated the canvass with a declaration of Communism which excited general amazement and disgust. Judge West's subsequent attempt to explain away the more offensive of his utterances could not re-establish confidence. There could be no respect for a candidate who ate one day the words spoken on another. Nor was Mr. Sherman's Mansfield speech calculated to recover the ground lost on the currency question, or to neutralize the fact that the President's friend, Matthews, was busily engaged in proving that in reference to finance Republicans and Democrats were substantially alike.

THE NEW YORK "POLICY" MEETING.

The New York Times exhibits a great anxiety to deal tenderly with the wealthy individuals who figured on the list of the policy indorsement meeting in New York Wednesday evening, but it exposes the sham and shallowness of the whole affair by the following comment upon the buncombe resolutions adopted:

"If the resolutions as a whole are deficient in boldness, there is certainly no want of audacity in their opening proposition: 'We rejoice in the recent and unquestionable evidences that every clause of the Constitution, as it is now established, is to-day accepted by an overwhelming majority of the citizens of the United States.' Where are the 'recent and unquestionable evidences' of so gratifying a state of things? Did the election of last November prove that the doctrine of equal rights for all as defined by the Constitution is accepted by an 'overwhelming majority' of the people? What has occurred since then to show a radical change in opinion or practice on that question? Where is the proof that the negro can, in Mississippi, South Carolina, or Louisiana, vote for Republican candidates, assuming such to exist, with greater freedom from molestation than he did last November? Where is the proof even that an 'overwhelming majority' of his fellow-citizens are united in the determination that the constitutional amendments which made him a citizen shall, at any cost, be enforced in their letter and their spirit. We submit that the first resolution of last night's meeting involves an assumption totally unwarranted by the facts. However much we may desire that it should be true, it certainly cannot be made so by any amount of vague wishes or unsupported assertions."

The vigorous and sensible article which we quote elsewhere from the Kennebec Journal, shows that at least one of our Republican contemporaries in Maine appreciates the significance of the Ohio lesson, and finds voice for its opinion.

SENATOR CONKLING

Interviewed by the Herald.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12. The Herald publishes an interview with Senator Conkling, referring to his alleged indorsement of Pitt's speech before the Rochester Convention, the Senator says when he proposed Pitt for permanent speaker he had no knowledge of the character of his speech. Before the speech was made he advised Pitt to be moderate and conciliatory.—Conkling expresses himself friendly to the Administration, but doubtful as to the practicability of the Southern and civil service reform policies. He thinks there is too much sentiment and too little work. He believes Ohio lost to the Republicans, in consequence of the attitude of the Administration. The election will result in sending either Ewing or Pendleton to the Senate and on this momentous consequences will result. A Republican ratification meeting of the State ticket is to be held at an early date in this city, and Conkling promises to be present and speak. The day is not yet fixed.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12. A New Orleans despatch says that Mayor Burke states that the test mony against the Louisiana returning board was obtained by J. C. He also gave some letters which led to the indictment of the returning board. Finding no good coming to Tilden by such testimony in the returning board case. He is in Boston. W. N. Spearing, an uncle of Littlefield, says he gave the latter $500 for the Vernon Parish returns which Wells had given him to destroy, and which showed alterations and forgeries. Murphy who represented Tilden went with Littlefield to Illinois where Governor Pitt promised Littlefield he should not be touched. Spearing says he got the testimony of Littlefield for Tilden and his friends, "we were never given any money, but were promised anything we wished instead, but after the testimony was procured, we were given the cold shoulder." No New Orleans politician had anything to do with it. It was all done in Washington. The trial of the returning board being no good to Tilden it has now been dropped.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12. The disposition of the Nez Perces Indians under Chief Joseph who surrendered to Gen. Miles has been the subject of correspondence between the War and Interior Departments, and the matter will be fuller considered and determined by the Cabinet. The general practice of the Government heretofore has been to assign captured Indians to such of the reservations as might have been selected for them with two exceptions, one being the case of captured Modocs, where several were hanged and other members of the tribe scattered among other Indians so as to break up the tribal relations of the band, the other was in the case of the captured Arapahoes, Kiowas and Commanches, who are now confined at St. Marion, Florida.

THE FORGER—GILMAN.

BEFORE RECORDER HACKETT.

His Confession Read.

Sentenced to Five Years in State Prison.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12. In the Court of General sessions to-day Wm. B. Gilman, the forger of Insurance scrip was arraigned before Recorder Hackett to tender a plea of guilty to forgery. He was surrounded by a number of respectable looking men, and his confession was read out by his counsellor. Council for the prisoner appealed to all circumstances of the case that they might be considered as extenuating. The confession is addressed to Rev. Dr. Houghton, Gilman's brothers, sisters and intimate friends, and states that from the time he began business, he had placed in his hands by friends sums of money ranging from $100 to $20,000 on interest at 7 per cent. These sums would often remain undisturbed for a long time, and it was understood that he employed them in business. He never speculated or lost or won money by wagers. He never made investments in enterprises, which promised well, but turned out badly. He knew he was running behind but hoped for better times. But times grew worse instead of better and the worse his affairs grew the more unwilling he became to investigate them. He could not bear to look deficiencies in the face. His books and accounts were neglected prior to the panic of 1873. He had made a proper use of trusts funds in his hands, but declining business and troubles of that year involved him in additional losses and he put forth these first "raised" certificates. Hoping that the next step would extricate him but he plunged in deeper and deeper. He could not state without reference what amounts were afloat; but the whole truth would be found at the American Exchange Bank, Union Insurance Company, Commercial Insurance Company and H. Talmadge & Co. He had not sold any fraudulent securities, but borrowed on them. He alone was responsible for every wrong act and no human being had a suspicion of it. He was to blame for expenses at home and in business which could not be lawfully met. His wife never persuaded him to any extravagance. In addition to these fraudulent transactions other persons must suffer, chiefly his brothers and sisters, probably to the extent of $75,-000. To sum up briefly he would say that decline in business, bad investments, heavy expenses and personal extravagance had betrayed him. He loved better to give away money than to spend it on himself. His thoughts and interests were ever with charitable works. After listening to the letter and remarks of counsel Recorder Hackett sentenced Gilman to five years in State Prison. After the sentence was passed on the prisoner he was permitted to visit his office in charge of a court officer. Rev. Dr. Houghton accompanied Gilman and with several of his friends was engaged about two hours arranging papers and preparing for a dividend of assets among the sufferers by forgeries. The party then were driven to the Tombs.

Resolutions were adopted endorsing the Administration of President Hayes, in its efforts to secure among all people of the United States complete reconciliation of feeling and establishment as of old.

RUSSIA.

Financial Matters.

LONDON, Oct. 12. The Times, financial article says, at St. Petersburg the rate of exchange is 23 pence, the lowest rate since the Crimean war. There seems to have been a kind of panic at St. Petersburg, yesterday, due to the great depreciation of paper currency, which depression threatens temporarily to engulf the nation in universal bankruptcy.

THE EASTERN WAR.

The Servians and Turkey.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11. The Times Vienna special says according to the most trustworthy intelligence the clothing, provisions and transportation of the Servian army are still very defective. It is not thought likely that Turkey as reported will address an ultimatum to Servia, as every day during which the Porte can avoid bringing a fresh enemy into the field is clear gain to Turkey and the powers whom Turkey intends to consult by means of a circular will certainly advise moderation.

The Marine Railways and shipyard in Brewer with about four acres of land, and 218 acres of timber land, in Aroostook County belonging to the estate of the late Hon. Wm. McGilvery, of Searsport, will be sold at auction at the Penobscot Exchange this morning.

"THREE FAST MEN" as played by John Stetson's Company last evening was one of the best variety entertainments that has been given in this city for years. First the company fulfilled the advertisements, it numbered all the people stated; no act was cut or hurried through, the company each and all is not second rate, and the hall of people went away at the close satisfied. The specialties were all first-rate, nothing worn out being given, and Stetson's company will get a full house when it visits this city again.

The marriage of Miss Hannah E. Sheehan to Capt. James Fennoll, of the Dredger Falmouth, on Thursday, was witnessed by several hundred people. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father McSweeny at St. John's Catholic church. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful presents. The evening after the marriage the bridal party went to Bucksport, where the dredger is now at work. We understand the Captain in a few weeks is to take the dredger to Canada, where he has been engaged to do some work that will take four years to complete the contract. We wish them success.

IMPROVEMENTS AT THE WATER WORKS. Mr. E. D. Quimby, who has been engaged for the past few weeks in grading the grounds around the house at the dam, has nearly completed his contract. There is a gradual slope from the railroad track toward the house until you get within about eight feet of the building, then there is a slope away from the house, forming a gutter for the purpose of draining off the water. The workmen are now about ready to commence putting down the concrete walk. This walk will extend around three sides of the building and will be about six feet in width. The gutter will also receive a coat of concrete, which will prevent it from washing. We understand that the ground in front of the house will be sown with grass seed, and another year the building and grounds will present a very attractive appearance.

Notes from Winn.

Our correspondent "Nopen" writes: Signs of prosperity are discovering themselves at Winn.

E. P. Loveloy of St. Stephens, who was burned out last spring, thinks of removing to Winn, and erecting a flouring mill on the falls above the Village just below the Five Islands, and I hear Frank Gilman, a distant relative will be connected with the enterprise. A friend, also from St. Stephens talks of buying the farm and mills of Daniel Haynes on Salmon stream, two miles below Winn village, on the Military road. Both these enterprises will materially increase the prosperity of Winn.

Isaac P. May has removed his blacksmith shop to the village, and George Gould of Milo has opened business here.

A sad case of [illegible] Winn lately. The wife of George [illegible] Crainе, agent for Hall's safes died at the Katahdin house on the afternoon of the eleventh inst. after a lingering illness. Mr. Craine is sick at Halifax, N. S., and Mrs. Craine died in distress, having no friends, and will undoubtedly have to be buried at the expense of the town. Mrs. Craine's mother from Milford, Mass., was in attendance on her for a few days.

THE FREDERICTON EXCURSION.

Visit to the Dam—Display of the Water Works—The Visitors highly pleased—Firemen's Supper—Entertainment at the Bangor Art Rooms.

The weather yesterday was decidedly unfavorable for the exhibition of the water works, as the rain began falling at an early hour in the morning and it continued to fall with very little let up, throughout the day and evening. But notwithstanding the wet, the Fredericton excursionists, the Bangor Water Board, and the Aldermen, together with a few of our prominent citizens, assembled at the Exchange-st. depot and at 10 o'clock they embarked on a special train for the Water Works.

On arrival at the dam the visitors were escorted through the building and thoroughly examined the magnificent machinery, which was greatly admired. The engine was running but was not connected with the pumps. After spending about half an hour in looking about the building, the party adjourned to the dam, where some time was devoted to various points of interest. In order to give the visitors some idea of the power at the works, a length of hose was attached to the hydrant in front of the building, and a fine stream of water played.

At about 11 o'clock the party returned to the city, where the rest of the morning spent in inspecting the various objects of interest. Through the courtesy of Messrs. Bacon & Huckins, a number of the visitors were entertained for some time in talking with the telephone. Masonic Hall was also thrown open and the Fredericton people spoke in the highest terms of praise of its beauty.

At about 2 o'clock in the afternoon people began to collect in East Market Square and long before the exhibition occurred, the sidewalk was crowded. At a little before three His Honor Mayor Hamlin and the Fredericton visitors, together with the Water Board and members of the City Government took a position in front of the Universalist church, where they had a fine opportunity to witness the exhibition of the water power.

As the clock struck three the fire alarm bell was sounded, and in an exceedingly short time, ten fine streams of water were being played in the air. Holly Hose No. 7, were stationed at the hydrant in front of Bowler & Merrill's, Elijah Low No. 8, at the corner of York and Exchange street, Union Hose at Patten's corner, and the two horse hose carriage, had the hydrants in front of the steamers house, and at the foot of Baptist Hill. At the close of this display, the two horse hose cart started from the steamers house, and ran to the lower end of Exchange street, and in less than a minute, and a half they were playing two streams of water from the hydrant at the foot of the street. As one of the pipes burst during the display, the exhibition at East Market Square was repeated.

The citizens of Fredericton, who have been agitating the question of a water supply for some time were greatly pleased with the display of the Holly system, and a gentleman made the remark that if the city of St John had only been provided with the Holly water, the recent fire would not have destroyed the vast amount of property that it did. As the soil of Fredericton is very favorable for laying the pipes the city could introduce a water supply at a very low figure.

At five o'clock the firemen who had made a very fine appearance throughout the exhibition, collected at the steamers house, where the tables were loaded with everything that would be likely to tempt the appetite of man. The supper was provided by Johnson brothers, and the expenses were defrayed by a collection which had been taken up by Chief Engineer Maddocks and Mr. Thomas White. After all had bountifully partaken of the good things placed before them, brief remarks were made by City Marshal Low, City Marshal Smith, of Fredericton, Thomas White, Esq., Alderman Pond, and Messrs. Leighton, Parker, Spratt, Mason, and Chief Engineer Maddocks. The utmost good feeling prevailed throughout the meeting and the occasion was one that will long be remembered by the firemen and their invited friends.

At about half-past seven in the evening the doors of the Bangor Art Association Rooms were thrown open, and in a short time the rooms were filled with a fine assemblage of people, including a large number of the excursionists. The hall was very tastily arranged, and presented a very fine appearance. At the end of the hall there were two American flags, and the British flag with the Provincial coat of arms. The "Weston collection of photographs", numbering eighty-six pictures were arranged in groups on the sides of the hall. This is a very fine collection of pictures for study, as it embraces the different schools of art, and many of the pictures are among the best representations of the works of the old masters.

The meeting was called to order by President Hamlin who delivered a short address of welcome, and alluded to the late Dr. Weston as being the principal mover in securing the collection of photographs, which have been named the "Weston Collection". At the close of these remarks, the audience were entertained by the following programme which was rendered in an excellent manner:

Piano solo, "Call me thine own," by Miss Fannie Evans; Song, "a song to lay at the feet of my love" by Mrs. Crowell; Song, "Only to love," by Mr. Moody; and a piano duet, "Variation on theme of Donizetti," by Mr. and Mrs. Davenport. At the close of this programme elegant refreshments were served, and the meeting closed at about ten o'clock. The Fredericton people spent the night at the Bangor House, and will return to their homes on this morning's train. They were very much pleased at the handsome manner in which they have been entertained by our citizens.

Fayette Shaw et al., vs. Daniel K. Pomroy, case reported yesterday. Verdict for plaintiffs, damages assessed at $1. [illegible] Palne. Knowles, D. Sanborn.

Joseph F. Smith vs. Charles W. Wiswell. Plaintiff and defendant were, on the 19th day of January last travelling in opposite directions on the road in Orrington, the defendant with a two horse team loaded with leached ashes—plaintiff with a horse and sleigh. The [illegible] drifted place in the road, and plaintiff set his team out one side and defendant's sled in passing struck the plaintiff's sleigh, and broke the cross bar and did some other damage to it. The plaintiff first sued his action to recover for the damage, in the Police court and it comes by defendant's appeal to this court. Plaintiff claims that he gave defendant ample room to pass, that defendant might by proper care have passed without trouble and that the accident happened solely through the carelessness of the defendant. Defendant says the road was badly drifted, that the road was narrow, that he was loaded, that he turned out all he could and that the plaintiff should have turned out further, and that the horse in springing to the road after the defendant had nearly passed, caused the sleigh to strike the loaded team. Verdict for plaintiff, for $6.57. Chapman, Simpson. Yeso.

Taste in dress is by no means a common gift. You see constantly the richest material worn in the most outre fashion, which only accents the vulgarity of the possessor. One of the best guides to chaste and unexceptionable elegance is "Andrews' Bazar," which is supplied direct from Paris and Berlin with the most novel and becoming things in costume. The ladies are no longer left to the judgment of incompetent and greedy modistes, but select and superintend their own work. This boon may be tested by sending to Cincinnati for a specimen copy. The magazine is becoming the rage with the ladies.

VEGETINE.

Necrosis, Scrofula, Dyspepsia, General Debility, Canker Humor, Liver Complaint, Rheumatism, Consumption of the Bowels.

CHARLESTOWN, MASS., March 25, 1876.

MR. H. R. STEVENS.

Dear Sir,—The following is a statement of my experience with the great Blood Remedy, Vegetine. I have been keeping a boarding-house here for many years, and have had the misfortune to have a great deal of sickness in my family. In one case in particular, I noticed the wonderful effect of Vegetine.

About the year 1867, a young man, then sixteen years old, who was a distant relative of mine, came home from sea. He had injured his left leg on board the ship some months before, and when the ship came in to this port he came to my house, being so feeble that he could not go to his home in Lowell. His leg was swollen above the knee more than twice its natural size, and he was obliged to drag it along after him, having no use of it whatever. The effect of this had reduced him to a mere skeleton. His father came down, and employed Dr. George Hayward of Boston to attend him, who then occupied a prominent position in the Massachusetts General Hospital. He pronounced it a bad case of Necrosis; said he must be removed to the hospital, have his leg opened and the bone bored, to allow the discharge of matter there collected; otherwise the leg must be amputated.

Not thinking it advisable to pursue this course, and having used Vegetine, the great Blood Remedy, in the past with so good effect, concluded to try it in this case. After taking it regularly for six weeks, his leg was but little swollen, and his general health so much improved that he did not look like the same person. At the end of five months he was pronounced perfectly cured. He remained in Lowell until the commencement of the war, then joined the army, and was pronounced a sound and well man.

The above I but one case out of many where I have seen this Blood Remedy used with unparalleled success. I have taken it myself for twenty years, more or less, for Dyspepsia and General Debility, and it always appeared to give me new life and vigor.

One lady boarder was completely cured from Canker Humor, after she had suffered for years, and tried almost everything else without receiving any benefit. Another lady was cured from Liver Complaint, which was a bad case, and so considered by the many physicians who had attended her from time to time.

I have known its use by other boarders for Rheumatism with extraordinary good effect.

A lady took it for Consumption of the Bowels, and found more relief than anything else she could procure.

I do not want to over estimate its usefulness, but I do want those suffering from sickness to know what this good medicine has done and is still doing, for I know what it is to be imposed upon when sick, and I think it is wrong for any one to over estimate a remedy at the expense of the helpless sick, and I, for one, will not do it under any circumstances whatever.

BRAINS.

(Concluded.)

Every night after that found me at Pleasant Street. I could not stay away. Besides all my interest in her an unaccountable impression took possession of me that she was in somewise associated with my own fate. I was going, so it seemed to me, straight toward my destiny—a destiny in some dim, undreamed of way connected with "Brains" and her little room.

I have said that from the first I had not much hope of her. My hope lessened every day. She would never come back to the place I had engaged another to fill till she got well. I should never watch again her tidy little ways, or be amused at her quaint womanliness. I had not thought it was in me to care for her so much, but my heart grew heavy as I saw her fading away. She suffered terribly with her racking cough, and the constant wearing pain in the side and chest; but she did not lose her bright cheerfulness. For a long time, too, she seemed to make light of her illness and tell me that in a little while she should be back doing my errands as of old.

The first time she said anything else was one April night. I went to her a little later than usual, and found the doctor with her. I had never seen before this Dr. Sargent His name seemed somehow strangely familiar, though I could not recall at the moment where I had heard it. He was bending over poor little Brains when I went in, but he raised his head and met my eyes with his own, so kind, so pitiful, so serious, that I felt drawn toward him at once The child put out her hand.

"You'll have to have her, Miss Macgregor," she said with a sad smile

I did not think at first who she meant and I asked her

"The girl that took my place, you know. I've been asking Doctor Sargent, and he doesn't think I'll ever be able to go back any more"

She was so calm that for very shame I tried to be calm also, but the tears would come, and I went out into the next room without speaking.

Soon Dr. Sargent joined me

"It is very sad," he said. "I have seldom been so much interested in a case Such a bright, patient little thing as she is, and so wonderfully womanly! She asked me herself, to-night, if there was any hope, and I had to tell her. You see how she bears it."

After he had gone I went back to little Susy. I had brought her a bunch of violets which I saw in a shop window as I came along, and her very pleasure in them made my heart ache. How she loved all beautiful things! How much she was capable of enjoying, and how little she had had to enjoy in this world, poor child! And now she was going!

I think she guessed my thought, for she touched my hand with a timid, caressing motion, and said, very softly.

"There will be brighter flowers there, Miss Macgregor. It hath not entered into the heart of man to conceive, you know. It is well for me, only it will be so hard for mother and Jane. But their Father will take care of them. You know what it says about the widow and the fatherless."

How unconsciously she reproved my lack of faith! I bent over her, and pressed my lips to the little cheek where the hectic burned. How many times I have doubted God, and what faith she had! She seemed to infuse into my soul new strength. As I went through the other room to go home I found Mrs. Mery crying very stilly, so as not to disturb her sick child, in a quiet, dreamy way inexpressibly pitiful. Poor Body was kneeling with her face buried in her mother's lap, fairly shaken by the violence of her suppressed sobbing. I only said as I went by,

"Don't grieve her by weeping. She has been telling me that God will take care of you"

"When I reached home I sat down and tried to think what I had known before about Dr. Sargent.

It carried me back to Horace Weir, John Sargent was his friend, I remembered—a classmate, and the wise Achates of his early manhood. Did they occupy such a relation, still, I wondered? Would I be mentioned between them? But no, Dr. Sargent knew of me only as Miss Macgregor, the fashionable dressmaker for whom little Brains had worked He would never associate me with a Helen Bryce, even if Weir had once made that name familiar to him What was there to arouse such tumult of hope and memory in my heart? I remembered little Susy and the world where she was going and tried to grow calm.

For a fortnight after that she failed fast Of course I went to see her every day, and it carried me strangely near to the eternal world whither her footsteps tended. You cannot think what a change it seemed to come back to the thoroughly earthy atmosphere of my fashionable establishment—to see the bright-hued silks, and laces white and dainty as hoarfrost—to hear the perpetual talk about what was stylish and what was becoming, and be complimented about my invention, my charming taste. It was like coming back to earth from the gate of Heaven

At length there came a day—it was toward the last of April—when I went earlier than usual to see little Brains. She had been so weak the day before that I felt anxious. I carried her the first May flowers I had seen. The little creature had a sort of passionate fondness for flowers not unusual in such an organization. She loved and cherished them as if they were her own kindred

When I went in I saw Dr. Sargent was in the room, and with him, his back toward the door, another gentleman The Doctor heard my footsteps and came out.

"A friend of mine is there," he said "Dr. Weir, from New York. He came on to visit me, and I brought him to see the child. There is no hope, of course, but he might think of something to relieve her that I did not."

I felt my face turning crimson under his searching glance. But neither he nor I made any comment. As soon as I felt sufficiently mistress of myself I went into the room Calmness stole like balm over my spirit as I crossed its threshold. I felt as if I were in the presence of waiting angels. I met Horace Weir's eyes, but I scarcely knew it as I went up to Susy, and saw the strange, seraphic light which made her little wan face seem as the face of an angel I gave her my flowers, and she took them and my hand together into her clinging hold

"Dear, kind Miss Macgregor," she said, fondly; "you won't have to bring me any more flowers. I am going where they blow all the time. What should I have done without you? How thankful I am that I went to your shop!"

"But if you hadn't come there, perhaps you would have lived," I said as well as I could for the sobs which were choking me. She thought a moment then she shook her head

"No I should not have outlived God's time; and you have made me so much happier. If I can pray for anything after I die, I shall ask Him, when I get to His feet, to bless you forevermore. Can you stay with me a little while?"

I took off my shawl and bonnet, and sat down at her bedside. Dr. Sargent came up to bid her good-night.

"I must go now," he said, "but I will come very early in the morning. Will you stay a while, Weir, in case anything should be wanted?"

"Certainly," answered a voice, every tone of which I knew well.

Little Brains looked up with such a bright smile—

"How kind every one is," she said "How kind you've always been, Dr. Sargent. Good-by!"

Moved by some sudden impulse of tenderness, Dr. Sargent bent over and kissed the little wistful face of the child he had tended so long and patiently. Next time he sees her it will be after he too has gone over the river. He will not be sorry then that he "did it unto the least of these," Christ's little ones.

Weir sat down in the outer room. I staid by Susy. Her mother came in, and sat restlessly, with white face, and eyes full of anguish and longing. Body had cried herself into a state of exhaustion, and she sat on the floor, her head in a chair, sleeping heavily. Shall I ever forget the glimpse I had that night into the heart of that dying child? Holding that little hand, looking into those eyes so full of meaning, and so soon to close forever, I drew nearer than I ever had before to the mysteries of death and of life! It was midnight, I think, when a sudden light illumined all her face, and as if in answer to a call we did not hear, she said,

"I am ready."

Her mother clung to her in a passion of tears and prayers. Her sister, wide awake now, was sobbing at her side. She kissed them both fondly.

"God loves you," she said.

Then she looked at me with wistful eyes. I bent down and kissed her, my tears falling fast on her white face.

"God loves you too," she said; and then, a moment after, she spoke again, as if that voice we could not hear were once more calling:

"All ready."

Then she turned her face, with that last smile on it, to the wall, and went home.

An hour afterwards she lay, as we had robed her in white garments, with shut eyes, and a look so calm and sweet upon her face you would have thought her sleeping. I had to go then; I knew my mother was waiting for me anxiously.

"May God comfort you," I said, going up to Mrs. Mery to bid her good night. She did not turn her eyes from the dead face on the pillow.

"Yes," she answered dreamily, "she said God loved us."

As I went down the stairs Weir followed me. When we were in the street he drew my hand through his arm, and spoke to me for the first time.

"Helen, that dead child has given us to each other. But for her could I ever have found you? Sargent knew how vain all my inquiries for you, since I came back, had been. He had seen a photograph of you which I carried—perhaps you have forgotten it—across the sea with me. He felt pretty sure that he recognized you from it the first time he saw you, and he knew, besides, that Macgregor was your middle name. So last week he wrote to me, and I came on to find you out."

We buried poor little Brains two days after that, in the cemetery at Forest Hills, under the shadow of a great rock. You will see her tombstone if you go there—a little white cross, on which there is no word save "Susy."

We left her there on the last day of April, under a sunshine bright as June. We put white flowers round, the little white face, and into the hands that should never be tired any more. And on the sod piled above her grave we left sweet blossoms to lie there and give forth their sweetness, and then die as she had died.

It was not long after that before I gave up my business to a successor and married Dr. Weir. We have been together for more than a year, enjoying a happiness that sometimes seems to me too blessed to last But we try to sanctify it by making ourselves ministers of God's bounty to His children What we do for Mrs. Mery and Jane is no charity, for we consider them a bequest from little Brains at whose bed-side we found each other anew.

To the Honorable Judge of Probate for the County of Penobscot:

The undersigned, administrator of the estate of John Y. McKenney, late of Bangor, in said county, deceased, respectfully represents that the goods and chattels, rights and credits of said deceased are not sufficient to pay his just debts and charges of administration, by the sum of five hundred dollars or more.

Wherefore your petitioner prays your Honor to grant him a license to sell, at public or private sale and convey the whole of the late homestead of said deceased, situate on French Street in said Bangor, as the residue would be greatly depreciated by the sale of any portion thereof, to satisfy said debts, expenses of sale, and charges of administration.

Said real estate is the same described in a deed recorded in the Registry of Deeds of said County.

Carriers make two deliveries daily, the first trip supplying the extremes of their routes.

Collections are made morning and evening in season for important mails—the down town boxes fifteen and the up town boxes thirty minutes before closing mails at the office

Holidays the Carrier's Window will be open for the delivery of letters from 8½ to 9½ A. M., and from 5 to 6½ P. M. Sundays from 8½ to 9½ A. M.

Any irregularities in the Carriers' department should be reported to the office
